Ticket details

I would like to acquire some information regarding the usage of data from the Warthunder Wiki (https://wiki.warthunder.com/Main\_Page).

My intentions are to create a website, that would allow to compare vehicles.

For this I would like to extract the more or less current information on Warthunder's Vehicles.

Can I use the data from the Wiki?

Do I need to mention Warthunder or Gaijin respectively?

Or is this disallowed due to your legal terms?

Or do I need to datamine the infos from the game myself?

Could I potentially run advertisements on my site to recuperate my financial investments?

Best regards,
Chika Ngwu

Thanks for the quick answer.

I contacted legal@gaijin.net, but I think that was the wrong way to handle this.

I'm really looking forward on the outcome of your investigations, as your feedback will dictate if I'm going to spend more time on my prototype or just drop the project.

If there's any question regarding the technical aspects, please don't hesitate to come back to me.

Best regards,

Apologies for the delayed response.

Yes, you can use this data. The general idea is that you should:

- 1) Put an active link to our Wiki, citing it as a source of the material whenever you're using text from the Wiki.
- 2) Clearly say that your website is not an official source, and that you're not affiliated with Gaijin Entertainment in any way.

Your website also should not encourage or advertise any illegal activity (i.e. selling game accounts or breaking the game rules in any way), as well as publish anything political (including charity donations information).

But you can obviously run legitimate ads (i.e. from Google).

Hey Alex,

thank you for the great news, it means a lot to me <3

I'll follow your recommendations regarding referencing the Wiki and stuff.

Also I only plan on maybe running Google AdSense to keep the server afloat, with my hands off the political/controversial stuff going on right now, as I don't want any association with these kinda things.

Have a blessed week and stay safe,
